MediTre

MediTre offers full support to the back through it's 3-part back rest. The back rest cushion has a vertical split integrated into it's centre which minimises pressure on the spine and instead supports the back muscles either side of the spinal column.

An independently height adjustable back rest ensures that lumbar support is provided where the user requires it. Also independently height adjustable is the thoracic/shoulder cushion which offers the user of the chair support at the top of the back and shoudlers.

MediTre is also available with two sizes of split seat mechanisms.

MediCom

Much like MediTre the MediCom offers full support to the back through it's 3-part back rest. The back rest cushion has a vertical split integrated into it's centre which minimises pressure on the spine and instead supports the back muscles either side of the spinal column.

An independently height adjustable back rest ensures that lumbar support is provided where the user requires it. Also independently height adjustable is the thoracic/shoulder cushion which offers the user of the chair support at the top of the back and shoudlers.

Due to it's higher back rest and wider thoracic support MediCom is more suitable for persons of medium size.

MediWork

MediWork offers it's occupant total support through the adjustability of the back rest cushion, thoracic cushion and neck rest, all of which height adjustable.

MediWork has a vertical split integrated into both back rest cushion and thoracic cushion. This minimises the pressure on the lower / mid and upper spine. A height adjustable neck rest provdies even further support to the nape of the neck when required.

Both the back rest and thoracic cushion are mounted on a unique 3D pivot which allows for lateral movement of the user and continually adjusts as they change their posture. Clever stuff!
